On Friday, April 13, the Freedom of Information Foundation of Texas and the State's Office of the Attorney General joined together to host an open records seminar at the Nacogdoches County Annex building. Present at the meeting were employees of local governmental bodies, attorneys, and members of the media.

The workshop was designed to educate public officials, journalists, and citizens of their rights and responsibilities relating to public information. A general overview of the Public Information Act and the Open Meeting Act were presented, as well as law governing charges under the Public Information Act.
